FAÇADE RIDES THE RAILS

Inch-by-inch, the entryway to Sunset Center was rolled back into place Tuesday after spending the summer in the parking lot. It will become part of the new auditorium's lobby.

Sunset inches toward completion

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE SUNSET Center renovation reached another milestone this week as the historic entryway — detached from the auditorium seven months ago — was rolled 60 feet along rails to its permanent place of honor.

Lopez House Movers from Salinas — a subcontractor hired by Roebbelen Contracting — took on the unusual job.

Crews attached a cable from the detached entryway to a column inside the new auditorium and used a lever to pull the distinctively designed lancet arches on casters along the rail system.

Numerous workers were on hand to guide the fragile facade on its journey.

Roebbelen's project manager, Ken Wenham, said the endeavor went fairly quickly until the mobile entryway came within six feet of its final resting place.

"Then work was done to adjust the rails so we could get it to actually fit within the new structure," he explained. "It was the kind of activity we just sort of made up as we went along," he added.

Sunset's historic entrance is still resting on jacks until it can be permanently attached to the new auditorium.

Ultimately the signature entrance will be enclosed within Sunset's new lobby.

Theatergoers will still pass through its familiar walls as they make their way from the lobby into the new state-of-the-art concert hall.

Council stands its ground on final version of LUP

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE BATTLE between the city council and the staff of the California Coastal Commission reached a climax this week when the council refused to accept a 1,600-square-foot limit on home sizes, decided to bring back the overnight parking ban on Scenic Road, and stuck to its guns on numerous other issues in the city's proposed Local Coastal Program.

In a grueling, late-night meeting, the council pored over changes coastal commission planners wanted in the 146-page Land Use Plan — the document that contains overall development rules for the city.

With a representative of the coastal commission staff in the council chambers, the council rejected many of the coastal staff's requests.

After sorting through the changes they could live with, the council unanimously voted to send the critical document to the coastal commission for approval at its December meeting in San Francisco.

The LUP is the first part of Carmel's proposed Local Coastal Program, which was completed by the city last December. It was supposed to be finished in 1981.

Among all the changes sought by the coastal commission's Santa Cruz office, the council was most alarmed at a set of 17 new policies on home design — including a cut in the maximum size of a house on a standard lot from 1,800 square feet to 1,600.

"I don't understand how the coastal commission can dictate that unless we have a dictatorship with the coastal commission in command," said Carla Ramsey. She referred to a public referendum in the mid 1980s, when the people of Carmel voted down a cut in home size.

The reduction in building size, along with the rest of the coastal staff's design directives, was rejected by the council majority.

"We spent a lot of time and money on design traditions and volumetrics to come up with innovative solutions," said Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud, noting that some of the coastal staff's suggestions could lead to homogeneous home designs.

However, councilwoman Barbara Livingston disagreed. "I think this is an effort by the coastal commission staff to develop some language to protect our community."

Infighting at coastal commission could put Dave Potter at helm

By PAUL MILLER

A BITTER showdown over who will lead the California Coastal Commission erupted at a meeting in San Diego last week after the group's chair, Malibu resident Sarah Wan, asked her fellow commissioners to give her another term.

The vote, added to the agenda at the last minute, ended in an embarrassing 7 to 5 setback for Wan, setting up another vote at the commission's December meeting in San Francisco that could elevate Monterey County supervisor Dave Potter to the chairmanship of the state's most powerful planning body.

The same meeting will also deal with Carmel's long overdue Local Coastal Program, which was given final approval by the city council this week (see story above).

Potter, who has been a coastal commissioner since 1997, said he had never seen the commission "so dysfunctional" as it is right now.

"It's gotten unnecessarily ugly," Potter said.

"After three years with the same chair, it makes sense for there to be a change. And as vice chair for three years it would stand to reason that I would be the next chair, but it's difficult to predict what the outcome will be," he added.

Sources close to the commission told The Pine Cone that Governor Gray Davis is dissatisfied with the way the commission has been run by Wan, a longtime coastal activist who expanded the commission's reach into minute areas of coastal planning, rather than focusing on big issues like offshore oil drilling and coastal erosion.

On a visit last year to Carmel, for example, Wan was overheard reminding one of her staff to make sure the City of Carmel lifted a ban on overnight parking along Scenic Road. City leaders bristled at the idea that a state official would dictate local parking rules.

The governor controls four appointments to the coastal commission. Sources say he has joined forces with the new assembly speaker, Herb Wesson, who also controls four appointments, to end the domination of the coastal commission by "extreme environmentalists."

STORM THREATENED THREATENED FISH

A juvenile trout — just 5 inches long — was briefly captured Thursday in the Carmel River Lagoon by wildlife officials. This fish and about 8,000 others barely escaped being sucked into the ocean -where, not being old enough for a saltwater environment, they would have died, officials say.

By PAUL MILLER

THE BIG storm that hit Monterey County last week — bringing record rainfall, high winds and huge waves — nearly wiped out this year's crop of juvenile steelhead trout in the Carmel River Lagoon, according to a biologist with the California Department of Fish and Game.

The powerful storm, which combined tropical moisture with arctic cold, hit so early in the year that "90 percent of the young trout in the lagoon would have been killed if they had been forced out to sea," Kevan Urquhart said. The smolts need at least several more weeks to be ready for a salt water environment, he added. But they nearly made a quick trip to the Pacific.

Terrorism conference brings county 'first responders' together

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AT A special briefing on terrorism Nov. 13, Monterey County's fire and police chiefs, public health officials, city managers and the sheriffs department took the next step toward creating the county's own anti-terrorism security plan.

At the conference, held at the Embassy Suites in Seaside, officials talked about a variety of safety measures — including a smallpox vaccination plan being developed by the county health department.

The public safety officials also talked about the prospect of receiving federal Homeland Security dollars designated for training and new equipment.

Carmel Police Chief George Rawson, the chairman of the county's newly established terrorism task force, said the conference helped the various emergency agencies in their quest to provide a unified response to terrorism.

Chemical and biological attacks don't stop at the boundaries within the county.

"If an incident happens in any one community in the county, the rest of the county is going to be impacted one way or another," Rawson said.

He noted that the county is also working on collaborative efforts with Santa Cruz and San Benito counties and even San Francisco.

Monterey County Health Director Len Foster described his department's efforts to develop a "two-front" smallpox vaccination plan.

The first part of the plan would provide inoculations for first line responders, including police officers, fire fighters and emergency room staff.

The other scenario being developed — "the one nobody hopes to see" — would involve mass immunization after an outbreak and would require storage of vaccines and extensive training.

In addition, the health department expects to receive $563,000 of federal funding each year for the next three years to develop a stepped-up disease surveillance program, to include a daily check of emergency room listings of patients and symptoms as well as monitoring of both prescription and over-the -counter drugs dispensed at pharmacies.

Terrorism update

Also at the conference, speakers from the FBI's International Terrorism Squad and the Center for Nonproliferation Studies at the Monterey Institute of International Studies shared their expertise with local officials.

In addition, the 95th Civil Support Team, a special California National Guard group dedicated to responding to terrorism, provided a briefing on weapons of mass destruction.

Rawson said his committee is hoping to bring the 95th Civil Support Team back to Monterey County to conduct a drill in the near future.

REAL ESTATE ON THE PENINSULA
BY JOHN S. LEVINSON

THE KID FACTOR

You're being transferred to a distant city. You decide to take the whole family on a shopping expedition — looking for your new home.

Be forewarned. Looking at homes is, frankly, a very difficult mental and emotional task. This is not to discount the fact that it can be a lot of fun. It's to point out, up front, that it is very difficult for a child to conceptualize what a room will look like with his or her furniture in it. And it's very natural for the child , therefore, to grow bored with the house search very quickly and to start paying attention to irrelevant details, like the quality of a homeowner's set of video games.

The imaginative leap, placing your furniture and your lifestyle in a home for sale and seeing if it fits — if, in fact, it sets off a positive emotional buzzer in you — is hard enough for adults without having to make certain their children aren't destroying the homes you look at. Okay, maybe not YOUR children, but believe me, I have stories!

The whole family, though, really should be brought into every stage of the home purchase and move. I recommend that you precede your actual home search with family meetings, where all your needs in a home are discussed fully and openly. The first home searches should probably be done by the adults, if possible, bringing the whole family in on the process when prime candidates for purchase have been found. Questions? Committee urges gallery freeze

By TAMARA GRIPPI

IN RESPONSE to the discovery that the number of art galleries in Carmel has increased over the last four years from 76 to 126, a citizens committee is advocating a freeze on the art dealer trade in town.

The Carmel Planning Commission received a report Nov. 13 from a committee assembled to study the rapid rise in the number of art galleries in the city.

"It's an extraordinarily large number of galleries," said planning commissioner Robin Wilson, chairman of the ad hoc committee. "It's about a 75 percent increase [over the last four years]."

Wilson explained that in addition to capping the current number of galleries, the group wants to toughen the city's requirements for an art dealership to open.

The committee proposed requiring a prospective gallery to either devote 80 percent of its merchandise to the work of one artist or to provide a working studio for artists whose work is on sale there.

Currently, the city also allows a gallery to open if it features artwork that is not available elsewhere in town — a requirement that is "very easy to meet," Wilson said.

The committee believes that by eliminating the more liberal avenue to open a gallery, the number of art dealerships should decline naturally by attrition.

Ultimately the city would set a lower cap

Police & Sheriff's Log

Loud talking, the sequel

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department last week.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 3

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Noise complaint at Monte Verde and Third. Resident said her neighbor was using power tools and disturbing her peace. Upon arrival, officer met with a man who was using a sander for the bottom of his boat. He had finished by the time officer arrived. No apparent violation.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Woman came to station to report that a business on San Carlos had sold one of her pieces on consignment but not paid for it. The contract specified woman would get 60 percent of the sale price, which was $2,000. Woman thought she should be paid $1,200. While at the store, woman said she was told to leave by man who used minor physical contact to effect the request. Man at store denied ever having any type of physical contact. He stated she had violated her contract by removing her other pieces and said he would not pay her.

You can set your watch by the whistling man

By LESLIE DUNN

DAN TARALLO cannot say exactly when he started whistling but it may have been about five years ago, after his divorce.

At first he only whistled occasionally — while making breakfast or driving to Monterey High where he taught school. Then Tarallo retired. He moved to Carmel. Before long he found himself whistling day and night, as he describes it, "the way other people talk to themselves."

One day, with time to spare, Tarallo sat on a bench outside the Carmel post office on Fifth Avenue. He began whistling. It wasn't a regular whistle but a lyrical trill that everyone said sounded like birds. People seemed to like it. He whistled whatever tune came to mind: "The Way We Were," "Impossible Dream," the theme from "Cats." It became a daily routine: At 12:30 and four o'clock, there he was.

That was three years ago. Post office employees say you can still set your watch by him. Just about everyone who strolls in and out of the post office knows him. He has even been immortalized in a Bill Bates cartoon (reprinted on this week's editorial page).

As for why Tarallo whistles, "It makes people happy," he says. "I watch some of these older people crossing the street. It takes all their energy. They tell me 'thank you' — that just hearing the whistling makes them feel better."

The other reason he whistles is — well, quite frankly, Dan would rather not say. It involves a particular healing process he's going through and one which requires an uncommon degree of solitude and concentration. So the whistling is a nice break. He finds it relaxing.

When Tarallo does speak, which isn't very often, he speaks with overwhelming earnestness about the direction of society, the importance of saying what you mean, the quest for self-awareness.

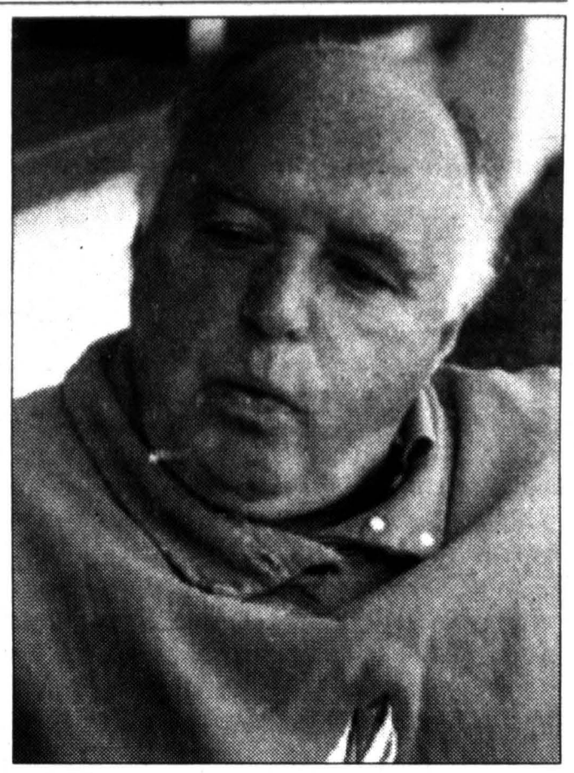
Eternally whistling

As soon as the talking is over however, he's whistling again. "I can't help it," he says. "I always have a song in my head." He whistles while watching TV and he whistles reading the newspaper.

Has anyone ever objected to his whistling? Yes. Three or four people have told him they find it annoying. He thinks those are pretty good odds, considering how long he's been puckering in public.

But then Tarallo has always considered himself a lucky man. WWII ended on his ninth birthday. He has two grown children. His son is the principal of Spreckels Jr. High and his daughter is a nutritionist in Cincinnati.

As far as Tarallo knows, he's the only whistler in the Tarallo lineage. His father was an Italian immigrant who worked in the local fishing industry. Not a whistler. So the origin remains a mystery, even to him. "It's a gift," he says, then smiles, and begins to — what else — whistle.



A fixture outside the Carmel-by-the-Sea post office at 12:30 and 4 p.m., Dan Tarallo is better known in Carmel as the whistling man.

Help stock food bank's shelves with turkeys, canned fare

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE FOOD Bank for Monterey County — which feeds 32,000 hungry people a month and provides Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners to many who would otherwise go without — faces empty shelves and a dearth of turkeys this year.

"I've been here six years and I've never seen the shelves so empty," said Leslie Sunny, executive director of the food bank. "At this point I don't have one turkey yet."

The food bank — which relies on financial support from foundations and individuals as well as donated food — has been hit hard by the recession.

Meanwhile, the nonprofit is seeing more and more requests for food. "When we see more people and less food, it's not a good formula," Sunny said.

Sunny estimated 85 percent of the food bank's recipients are families with children.

The organization distributes the food in numerous ways — through a network of emergency pantries run by local churches, Meals on Wheels, and its own Senior Brown Bag and Food for Children programs.

Each year, the food bank also distributes its turkey donations to the Thanksgiving Day dinner at the Monterey Fairgrounds and other community pantries.

How to help

Those interested in donating turkeys can buy a gift certificate for a bird at a grocery store or drop off a frozen turkey at the food bank's warehouse at 815 W. Market St. in Salinas. Donations of yams, cranberry sauce and stuffing would also be appreciated.

The food bank is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday each week. This Saturday, the organization will also accept donations between 9 a.m. to noon.

Sunny hopes that by next week, people will embrace the giving spirit. In the past, employees of local businesses have taken up collections to buy turkeys.

The food bank is also in great need of high-protein, nonperishable food to feed families who depend on the agency on an ongoing basis.

Locals are invited to drop off donations of peanut butter, canned tuna and chicken, rice, beans, soup and chili to food bank barrels set up at all local fire stations, libraries and Albertson's stores.

Financial donations can be sent to the food bank's main office in Salinas. "If everybody would give just a little, we would be fine," Sunny said.

on the overall number of galleries. The committee would relax its restrictive standards as soon as the number of galleries drops "to some more acceptable figure," according to the report.

(The city already limits restaurants on Ocean Avenue to 15 and jewelry stores in town to 32.)

After studying the Carmel art gallery phenomenon, the committee concluded that the 75 percent increase in galleries has upset the balance of businesses downtown.

The report also concludes that "the proliferation of galleries has been accompanied by a sharp decline in the general quality of some gallery merchandise."

Members believe such a decline in quality hurts Carmel's reputation as a city supportive of the fine arts.

Other members of the ad hoc committee included Mel Kline, Francyne Laney, Kati Lewis and planning commission chairman Bill Strid.

Though the planning commission didn't discuss the report at its Nov. 13 meeting, Strid said a public hearing would be scheduled sometime soon.

Secessions rejected by big margins in L.A. election

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CARMEL VALLEY residents who hope to turn their scenic valley into a city of its own may not be encouraged by the results of the Nov. 5 election in the city of Los Angeles where secession moves by the San Fernando Valley and Hollywood were both rejected by very big margins.

'The idea of local control will resonate for a very long time.'

— Laurette Healey, co-chair, San Fernando Valley Independence Committee

Citywide, the San Fernando Valley secession issue was put to rest by a 2-to-1 margin. Even within the boundaries of the proposed new city, just 50.77 percent voted yes.

The vote put an end to a six-year campaign to create a new city in the megalopolis' most populous district. Millions were spent on the campaign, which supporters characterized as a victory, even though they lost badly.

"The idea of local control will resonate for a very long time," Laurette Healey, co-chair of the San Fernando Valley Independence Committee, told the L.A. Times.

Her statement seemed true — at least for now. Wednesday, the Los Angeles City Council convened in the valley. City officials are promising to pay more attention to its needs.

"We are going to need to focus on the equity of providing city services throughout Los Angeles," city council president Alex Padilla said after one San Fernando Valley resident complained of the "appalling" condition of roads in her neighborhood.

On election night, a would-be mayor and city council members for the City of San Fernando convened at their hotel headquarters. They were elected to offices that do not exist.

In Hollywood, the move to create a separate city out of the famous movie district was rejected by an even bigger margin. Only 29 percent of voters citywide supported it.

Both moves were spurred by a feeling of neglect that some residents feel in the nation's second-largest city. They think their tax dollars are soaked up even while they are ignored by officials at city hall.

Likewise, some residents of Carmel Valley say county supervisors aren't doing enough to protect their lifestyles. Their push is in its infancy and it could be years — if ever — before voters get a chance to have their say on the City of Carmel Valley.

Because Carmel Valley is part of unincorporated Monterey County, its secession won't have to be approved by the whole county. The biggest problem in creating a City of Carmel Valley may be meeting the state's financial requirements — that the county left behind not suffer a loss of revenue, and that the new city provide services without raising taxes.

San Fernando cityhood supporters' fate was in the hands of the whole City of Los Angeles — because state law makes it harder to separate from an existing city.

This requirement led to talk of a lawsuit over the failed San Fernando secession movement.

But one cityhood supporter said he wouldn't participate in a lawsuit because of the narrow margin of victory in the would-be city.

"If the San Fernando Valley had voted overwhelmingly for secession, we might have had a stronger case, but to just squeak by, I don't think we have a good chance in court," one city council candidate said.

FISH

of the sandbar at the mouth of the Carmel River — just like they did in January 2000 when the lagoon flooded a low-lying neighborhood.

"It was going gangbusters," said Howard Skidmore, who lives on Monte Verde Street at the edge of the lagoon. On Friday morning the water had risen several feet, Skidmore said. With heavy rain falling and more on the way, county officials sent in a crew to get ready to open the lagoon to the sea.

Meanwhile, Urquhart and several other experts have been closely monitoring the growth of the young trout, which hatch in the upper river in the spring, and then mature through the summer and fall, preparing to return to the ocean in the winter. It's a cycle that's been going on for millennia — but which is sometimes at odds with human needs. Pumping from the river lowers its level in the summer, leaving many fish to die on the exposed river bottom. And when the river starts flowing in the winter, they could be sent to the ocean prematurely if too much rain falls.

On Saturday, the crisis passed when the tide receded without overfilling the lagoon. But compounding the fishes' problems was the fact that, despite nine inches of rain in the mountains above Carmel Valley, the river didn't flow all the way to the lagoon. As the waves filled it, the salinity of the lagoon rose. Without a source of fresh water to offset the seawater invasion, the trout might die in the lagoon, wildlife officials said.

Barrier to a solution?

Biologists say the delicate job of protecting the steelhead trout — a "threatened species" on the federal list — while keeping floodwaters out of homes would be a lot easier if a metal barrier were constructed around the Carmel River Lagoon. But if wildlife officials like the barrier idea, most of the people who live nearby apparently don't.

That was the consensus that emerged from a meeting this week as a group of residents of a flood-prone neighborhood near the mouth of the Carmel River had their first chance to ask detailed questions about a plan to erect a 2,500-foot-long barricade along the north side of the lagoon.

The metal barrier, which would be as high as eight feet, "is the most plausible solution that would simulate a natural environment," Monterey County public works director Lew Baumann told the audience Wednesday night.

"There seems to be enough agency 'buy-in' for the idea to warrant public scrutiny of it," said Fifth District Supervisor Dave Potter, referring to a multitude of government agencies in charge of protecting the environment. Federal wildlife officials, in particular, have been pushing the county to end its longstanding practice of bulldozing the sandbar that holds back the lagoon.

'My biggest concern is not my view. It is that the environment is protected.'

— Kathleen Jackson

The metal barrier would keep flood waters out of nearby homes, while allowing the lagoon to rise enough to break through to the Pacific Ocean on its own. But it might spoil the serene vista enjoyed by residents.

"I'm really emotional about this," said Linda Cooperman, who lives in a house right next to the lagoon. "It destroys our view."

"Why does it have to be so close to the houses?" asked Virginia Atkinson.

Several homeowners said their homes had never flooded and asked why the barrier was even necessary. They seemed to be unaware the floods had been kept away because, nearly every year, a county bulldozer had opened the lagoon to the sea — a practice wildlife officials say must end.

One homeowner proposed a removable barrier that could be put in place solely during winter months. Another suggested building walls around homes that requested it, giving them a choice of risking flooding or losing their view.

Just one resident gave a partial endorsement to the barrier idea. "My biggest concern is not my view. It is that the environment is protected," said Kathleen Jackson.

Nancy Zweng asked whether federal and state laws allow a "balancing" of the needs of the fish with human requirements. When she was told the answer was yes, she asked why that balancing principle couldn't be used to justify continued bulldozing of the sandbar, as has been done for more than 20 years.

Joyce Ambrosious, a representative of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Fisheries Division, said the law requires the county to end the practice but said her agency would definitely "not stand in the way of protecting life and property."

The county public works director asked homeowners along the lagoon to take a photo showing how the barrier — which has been staked out with white poles — might affect their view. The poles will stay up until Thanksgiving, supervisor Potter said.

wife, mother, and friend. She was a member of El Estero Presbyterian Church, Carmel Foundation, J.A.C.L., The Monterey Nisei Retirees Club and volunteered over the years for many local organizations.

In 1999, the City of Carmel honored her and her husband with a special recognition for their contribution "to our community in an extraordinary manner and whose efforts have made this village the special place that it is." She was active in entertaining, exploring beaches, photography, oil painting, gardening, collecting art glass, befriending Japanese visitors and trips to Whidbey Island, Wash.

Mrs. Ishikawa is survived by her husband of 62 years, Roy of Carmel; two daughters, Susan and Rona, both of Washington; and three sons, James of Seaside, Curtis and Troy, both of Carmel; a sister, Fumiye Kodani of Carmel; a brother, Isamu Sakoda of San Jose; granddaughter, Whitney Ishikawa of Salinas; and numerous nephews and nieces.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be made to either the American Diabetes Association, attn.: ADA Web, P.O. Box 1833, Merrifield, VA 22116 or Hospice House of Monterey.

MARY SARA MARCHESE, 81, mother of four, military wife and homemaker, died Oct. 18.

Born Mary Sara Pisasale in Omaha, she made her home in Pebble Beach for 30 years, from the time her husband, Col. Tom A. Marchese, retired from the Army.

She was a devoted mother not only to her children, but to all generations of the large Italian family whose company she relished. She loved to entertain and used her skills as a gourmet cook to enhance a broad range of gatherings in her home. When not in her kitchen, she could be found in the school bleachers for all manner of athletic events, cheering on her children and grandchildren.

A dedicated military wife with a worldwide circle of friends, Mrs. Marchese managed more than two dozen household moves during her husband's career. She delighted her family with her uncanny ability to remember all important dates and everyone's phone number by heart.

Among her many services to the community, she served 10 years as a Red Cross hospital volunteer. She was also an avid reader and traveler.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Tom, and a son, John Joseph. She is survived by her brother, Fred Pisasale of Omaha; daughters Lucile Roberts of Hawaii and Concetta of Bolinas; son Tom Jr.. of Pacific Grove and five grandchildren. The family suggests any memorial contributions be sent to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula or Hospice House.

BARBARA BOISOT FRIZZELL, 85, died Oct. 20 at her Carmel home. A native of Waterloo, Iowa, she had resided in Carmel for 50 years.

She was a homemaker for 69 years and a member of the Steinbeck House Guild in Salinas and the Peter Rabbit Chapter of the Children's Home Society, Carmel. She was a volunteer for the Yellow Brick Road and enjoyed bridge, mah-jongg, crafts and being with her family.

She is survived by her companion of 19 years, Arthur McCrindle of Carmel; sons Virgil Frizzell, Jr. of Virginia and Louis of Salinas; daughters Barbara Anne Elliott of Carmel and Linda Tidwell of Prunedale; 15 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by a son, Robert, in 1987.

Contributions in her memory may be made to the Yellow Brick Road Benefit Shop or Hospice of the Central Coast.

COASTAL COMMISSION TURNS DOWN DEMOLITION REQUEST

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

WITH A month to go before the first half of Carmel's Local Coastal Program is heard by the California Coastal Commission, a proposed demolition was rejected by the state board Nov. 7.

The commission voted to deny Alan and Donna Calamia's application to tear down a 824-square-foot cottage to build their 1,800-square-foot retirement home.

The Calamias, who attended the commission's Sept. 11 meeting in Los Angeles, decided at that time to postpone the hearing of their project in light of the fact it would likely be denied.

At the September meeting, the commission unanimously rejected two other demolition requests.

However, by the November meeting the Calamias' project was coming up against the deadline for its hearing, according to coastal staffer Mike Watson.

The couple faced the choice of either withdrawing their application or taking their chances with the coastal commission. Coastal Commissioner Dave Potter said he advised waiting until the LCP is finished.

The couple did not attend the commission's Nov. 7 meeting in San Diego, where commissioners voted to go along with the staff's recommendation to deny the project.

The state board, concerned with the replacement of older Carmel cottages being replaced with new homes, has been reluctant to approve demolitions in the city until the Carmel's LCP is certified, although it has made some notable exceptions.

8.16.010 Definitions.

A. The words listed in this section, as used in this chapter, are defined as follows:
1. "AB 939" means the California Integrated Waste Management Act of 1989 (Assembly Bill No. 939), codified, in part, at Public Resources. Section 4000 et seq., as it may be amended from time to time, and as implemented by the regulations of the California Integrated Waste Management Board, or its successor.
2. "Ashes" means ashes as conventionally known.
3. "City garbage collector" or "collector" means any person with whom or with which the City may contract for the collection of garbage, ashes or refuse, rubbish, recyclables or yard waste, within the City; or in the absence of such contract, it shall mean any person or organization, including the City itself, lawfully engaged in the collection of garbage within the City.
4. "Curbside" is the standard word used in the garbage industry to describe that area adjacent to a premises on the "curb" located at its front. As used in this chapter, "curbside" means such locations in the commercial districts and, when referring to the curbless residential district, it means an area on or immediately adjacent to the public right-of-way in front of the premises. Thus, "curbside collection" means the collection and removal by the collector of garbage, recyclables or yard waste placed at the curbside.
5. "Garbage" means such putrescible matter as regularly accumulates as an incident to the occupation of premises and shall be deemed to mean and made to include table refuse and every description of discarded matter, animal or vegetable (including unwashed glass, metal or plastic containers for the same), that attends the preparation, consumption, transportation or storage of meat, fish, fowls, fruits, vegetable and other foods of whatever character.
6. "MRF" or "materials recovery facility" means:
   a. A facility licensed or permitted in accordance with AB 939 which separates secondary materials, such as paper or mixed glass and metal containers, and processes them for sale to end users; or
   b. A firm that purchases and markets source-separated solid wastes and recyclable materials.
7. "Premises" means any tract or plot of land with the building(s) thereon or any building or part of a building used as a dwelling, place of living or place of business by any person, persons, or business entity and shall include all out buildings used in connection therewith, including, but not limited to, garages, wood sheds and the like, and all open spaces on any building site in connection therewith. Premises devoted to residential use having once been occupied shall for all purposes of this chapter be considered as occupied premises in the future, except for such periods of time as an exemption from service or minimum charge may have been obtained pursuant to CMC 8.16.130.
8. "Commingled Recyclable Materials" means a product that may be collected, sorted, cleansed, treated, and reconstituted into material that would otherwise become solid waste, and returned to the economic mainstream in the form of raw material for new, reused or reconstituted products which meet the quality standards necessary to be used in the marketplace. Such material regularly accumulates as an incident to occupation of premises and includes glass, paper, newsprint, aluminum, steel, plastic, cardboard and the like.
9. "Refuse" means and includes such combustible and noncombustible materials as regularly accumulate as an incident to the occupation of premises and includes cloth, rags, paper, leather, shoes, rubber, matting, bedding, boxes, chairs, tin cans, bottles, crockery, glass and the like.
10. "Rubbish" means such material as irregularly accumulates upon premises, or results from construction, such as concrete, lumber, wood, tree trimmings, plaster, brick, stone and the like.
11. "Waste" means and includes ashes, rubbish and refuse.
12. "Yard waste" means substances that are biodegradable and decay into their constituent substances, such as grass clippings, leaves, brush, weeds, trimmings, garden debris and the like, which accumulate upon premises.

B. Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to forbid the maintenance in the R-1 district, according to good gardening practice, of a compost pile consisting of pine needles, leaves, grass and garden debris in a quantity appropriate for use on the premises. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.020 Garbage, Commingled Recyclable Materials and Yard Waste in Residential Areas.

It is conclusively presumed that garbage, commingled recyclable materials and yard waste will be generated or created in connection with the occupancy of any premises devoted to residential use where such premises contain any facilities that can be devoted to the cooking or refrigeration of food products. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.030 Garbage, Commingled Recyclable Materials and Yard Waste Receptacles.

A. The owner, lessee, tenant, or occupant of every developed property, in every zoning district, shall provide on such premises one or more conventional watertight, galvanized metal or plastic garbage receptacles, or the optional plastic waste wheel design garbage receptacle. Commingled recyclable materials and yard waste receptacles must be of a plastic waste wheel design. Garbage receptacles that are not of the waste wheel design shall be fitted with two handles and have a capacity of at least five gallons but not more than 32 gallons. Plastic waste wheel design receptacles may be 64 gallons. All receptacles shall have a tight-fitting lid that shall cover the receptacles at all times except when garbage, commingled recyclable materials or yard waste is placed in or removed from the receptacle. All garbage must be removed from the premises where the garbage is created.

B. All garbage, commingled recyclable materials and yard waste receptacles in the R-1 District shall be located in the rear or side yard setback, screened from public view, and shall be collected, emptied, and returned to their original location by the collector.

C. All garbage, commingled recyclable materials and yard waste receptacles in the commercial districts shall be fully contained on private property and screened from public view. No garbage, commingled recyclable materials or yard waste material receptacles in the commercial districts shall be placed at curbside for collection at any time unless on-site garbage, commingled recyclable materials or yard waste receptacle storage is not available. If on-site garbage, commingled recyclable materials or yard waste receptacles storage is not available, receptacles in the commercial districts shall be placed at curbside the morning of or the evening preceding scheduled pickup and removed immediately following collection.

D. All garbage, commingled recyclable materials and yard waste must be removed from the premises where the garbage is created by the collector contracted by the City. The disposal of private garbage generated by any domestic, commercial or quasi-public use in any City-owned public garbage receptacle is unlawful.

E. In all zoning districts of the City, with the exception of businesses in the commercial district that do not have on-site storage, the required receptacles for recycled materials including but not limited to glass, paper, newsprint, cardboard, plastic, aluminum, bi-metal containers and steel shall be a commingled recyclable waste wheeler receptacle provided by the City's recycling collector. These commingled recycling receptacles are intended for the collection of all approved recyclable materials, and the City's collector shall be responsible for collection and retrieval from the private property of each customer's rear or side yard, not at the curb.

F. In all zoning districts of the City, the required receptacles used for composting for such authorized materials as cut grass, weeds, trimmings, garden debris and the like shall be receptacles provided by the City's collector, the Monterey Peninsula Waste Management District or other City authorized commercial establishment. Any composting process which includes any food waste as an ingredient, whether on public or private property, shall be enclosed in such receptacle.

G. Every tenant, lessee, occupant or owner of any premises where ashes or refuse are created may provide on such premises, in addition to the garbage receptacle, one or more receptacles having a capacity not exceeding 64 gallons, or such other receptacle as may be provided by the collector to contain all ashes or refuse which may accumulate upon the premises.

H. No conventional garbage receptacle shall be loaded so that the combined weight of receptacle and contents exceeds 60 pounds, with the exception of an approved waste wheeler design receptacle provided by the collector specifically for such purposes.

I. Every tenant, lessee, occupant or owner of any premises where garbage, commingled recyclable materials or yard waste receptacles are provided shall be responsible for keeping such receptacles in a clean and sanitary condition. (Ord. 99-05 § 1, 1999; Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.040 Hot Ashes.

Hot ashes shall be placed in a covered metal receptacle, other than a garbage, commingled recyclable materials or yard waste receptacle, until such ashes are extinguished and cool. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.050 Removal of Garbage and Waste.

All garbage accumulated in private dwellings or residences shall be removed at least once a week by the City's collector except as provided in CMC 8.16.030. All garbage accumulated in hotels, or other multiple dwellings serving meals, including but not limited to, boardinghouses, restaurants, fresh food markets and other like places shall be removed at least every two days or more often if necessary. All waste shall be removed as often and as soon as the receptacles provided therefor are filled. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.060 Burying Garbage or Waste.

A. It is unlawful for any person to bury waste or other discarded, used or left over substance in any alley, street, road, highway, public park or other public property or a public place in the City, or upon the beach owned by the City, except waste deposited on City property in connection with authorized municipal fill operations.

B. It is unlawful for any person to bury any garbage, refuse, rubbish, waste or any other discarded, used or leftover substance in any private property in the City without the consent of the owner thereof or after being notified by the proper authority of the City that such practice is a menace to public health. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.070 Burning of Certain Waste Materials.

Waste consisting of paper and wooden materials, and dry grass, brush or leaves, may not be burned in any stove or fireplace except as follows: Clean paper waste such as newsprint may be used to kindle a fire of clean, dry, unpainted wood. Products such as artificial logs and pellets that are manufactured specifically for the purpose of burning in fireplaces and stoves may be burned in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions. All burning in fireplaces and stoves shall be done in such manner as to permit continuous combustion by a visible flame. All open burning is prohibited within the City except as set forth in CMC 8.32.150. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.080 Burning of Garbage.

Within the City it is unlawful for any person to burn any garbage, recyclable materials, manure or waste not permitted to be burned by the provisions of CMC 8.16.070. It is likewise unlawful within the City for any person owning, occupying or managing property to permit the burning of such garbage, recycle materials, manure or waste on such property. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.090 Accumulation of Waste and Junk on Private Property.

It is unlawful to accumulate, or permit the accumulation of, waste, items of machinery, furniture or household appliances which have fallen into disuse or disrepair, on private property in any area which is visible from any other public or private property. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.100 City Garbage Collector – Duties.

A. It is required that the City's collector collect garbage, and commingled recyclable materials at least once a week from every premises, as defined in CMC 8.16.010, within the City, where garbage is created or presumed to be created, and from restaurants, fresh food markets and other like occupancies creating garbage, as frequently as such garbage is required to be removed by the provisions of this chapter. It is further required that in all residential and commercial zones of the City, after the collecting of such garbage, the City collector return the receptacles to a screened location on private property at the side or rear yard of the premises at which said collection took place. The City collector shall notify the City Administrator promptly of any infractions of collection and the City Administrator shall take proper corrective action.

B. It is further required that all ashes to be removed and all refuse attributable to any premises within the City be collected by the City collector from every premises as frequently as ashes and refuse are required to be removed by the provisions of this chapter.

C. It is further required that the City collector collect commingled recyclable materials at least once each week from every premises, apartment, or business within the City and yard waste at least once each month from every premises within the City where commingled recyclable materials or yard waste may be generated or presumed to be created. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 999).

8.16.110 Owner Liability – Collection Service.

The occupant of each premise within the City, or the owner of any other premises upon which solid waste may be produced or accumulated, shall obtain and maintain adequate disposal service from the City, its agents, or its franchisee, and shall be liable for and shall pay the full amount of any and all fees or charges imposed for such services.

Receptacles for all solid waste collection services shall be placed in the side or rear yard for collection prior to the scheduled time for collection. Except when authorized by the City Administrator upon a showing of reasonable necessity, no person shall leave any residential receptacle or receptacles at the street curb or in any other place on City owned property or private property visible from the street. Commercial receptacles shall not be stored on any public right-of-way or property, and shall be screened from public view, except on the day of pickup, and shall be returned to their stored location within two hours of pickup.

8.16.120 Owner Liability – Minimum Service Charge.

The tenant, lessee, occupant and owner of any premises devoted to residential use which contains facilities for the cooking or refrigeration of food products or generation of recyclable materials or yard waste are made jointly and severally liable to the City collector for a minimum service charge as established in the City's franchise agreement for all periods after such premises are originally occupied. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.130 Exemption from Collection Service.

A. Upon notifying the City collector, the owner or tenant of any premises may discontinue garbage, commingled recyclable materials and yard waste collection for such periods of time as their premises is/are vacated, if, in the opinion of the City collector, there is no actual need for a collection.

B. The tenant, lessee, occupant or owner of all other premises is/are required to maintain garbage, commingled recyclable materials and yard waste collection. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.140 Contracts for Removal of Garbage, Commingled Recyclable Materials, Yard Waste, Ashes, Refuse, or Rubbish.

The City Council may enter into a contract with and license any qualified person, firm or corporation as collector of garbage, commingled recyclable materials, yard waste, ashes, refuse or rubbish, upon the terms and conditions set forth in this chapter, and the rates for the removal of such garbage, commingled recyclable materials, yard waste, ashes, rubbish, and refuse, the specific receptacles for collection; and the mode of collection of such rates shall be as provided in Appendix A of the City's Franchise Agreement. Contracts with City collector(s) may be entered into in either of the following ways:

A. Negotiation. The City Administrator may negotiate a contract with any person believed capable of providing high quality service at reasonable rates. Such contract shall include the terms and conditions required by this code and include the terms and conditions not in conflict with this code as the City Administrator deems reasonable to secure the collection and disposal services in the best interest of public health, safety and welfare. The contract shall be approved by the City Council.

B. Calling for Bids. The City Administrator may elect to call for bids on the collection and disposal contract or contracts. The bid process shall be as follows:
1. If the City Administrator elects to call for bids she/he shall do so by letter calling for bids and setting forth the terms and conditions of the contract. Only qualified garbage or recycling collectors may bid for the contract or contracts. A qualified collector shall be a company or corporation with at least seven years of municipal garbage and recycling collection experience.
2. Publishing of Notice. The City Administrator shall cause to be published once a week for two successive weeks in the official newspaper of the City a public notice which shall set forth all of the terms and conditions embraced in the letter, and the time, date and place for the receiving and opening of sealed bids, which shall not be sooner than one full week from the date of the first publication of the notice.
3. Award of Contract. Upon examination by the City Administrator of the bids, the contract may be awarded to the best bidder by the City Council on the recommendation of the City Administrator. The City Administrator may postpone the granting of the contract from time to time until she/he has had a full and complete opportunity to examine into the merits of each bid and, if none of the bidders is deemed satisfactory, the City Administrator may reject all bids and either advertise for additional bids or enter into an interim contract with any satisfactory bidder upon such terms and conditions as are satisfactory to the City Administrator and the City Council.
4. Other Terms and Conditions. No contract for garbage, and collection, disposal, or recycling of commingled recyclable materials or handling of yard waste shall be for a period of more than 10 years including rights to extend. Terms and conditions other than those mentioned in this code may be put into the contract by the City. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.145 Rates and Fees.

A charge shall be collected from the lessee, owner, tenant or occupant of all premises within the corporate limits of the City for services rendered in the collection and removal of garbage, the recycling of commingled recyclable materials and yard waste, or dispose of ashes, refuse and rubbish. The fees for residential and commercial rates shall be established by resolution of the City Council after a public hearing has been duly noticed and held. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.150 Enforcement.

A. It shall be the duty of the County Health Officer and the City Code Enforcement Coordinator to enforce the provisions of this chapter and they or their duly appointed agents shall have the power and authority to enter all premises at and during reasonable hours for the purpose of determining whether or not the provisions of this chapter are being violated.

B. If any person fails or neglects, for a period of three days after written notice, to have any garbage, waste or manure removed, the County Health Officer or City Code Enforcement Coordinator may direct the same to be removed by the collector, and for this purpose the collector and County Health Officer or City Code Enforcement Coordinator may enter the premises and remove or cause to be removed all such garbage, waste or manure so condemned and ordered to be removed, and the cost of the removal shall be a charge and lien on such premises or may be collected in a personal action against the owner, tenant, lessee or occupant of the premises. The refusal by the owner, tenant, lessee or occupant of any premises to allow or permit such garbage, waste or manure to be so removed shall be deemed a misdemeanor.

C. Any person, property owner, tenant, or lessee in the R-1 or R-4 districts of the City failing to abide by the provisions of this code may be charged with a misdemeanor.

D. Any person, corporation, property owner, tenant, lessee or business owner in any commercial district failing to abide by the provisions of this code may be charged with a misdemeanor and/or the revocation of his/her/its license to do business within the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

8.16.160 Nonliability of City for Accidents of Damage.

The City or any of its public officials, officers, employees, and agents, other than the collector of garbage, commingled recyclable materials, yard waste, ashes, refuse, rubbish and waste shall not be liable for any accidents, damage or neglect of any kind or nature arising from the collection and removal of garbage, commingled recyclable materials, yard waste, ashes, refuse, rubbish and waste. Garbage collection shall be performed in as neat and quiet a manner as may be possible, consistent with reasonable dispatch. The City collector shall carry the necessary liability and property insurance, workers' compensation insurance and industrial accident insurance in amounts and with insurance companies acceptable to City, as provided by the laws of the State of California. Upon the collector's failure to do so, the City Council may provide such insurance and charge the premium therefor to the collector, who shall, on demand, reimburse the City for any premium paid for such insurance. The collector shall enter into a hold harmless agreement prepared by the City whereby the City, its public officials, officers, employees and agents are held harmless, defended and indemnified under terms set forth in the agreement. (Ord. 99-01 § 1, 1999).

PLANNING COMMISSION FIXES VOLUMETRICS

THE CARMEL Planning Commission unanimously revised the city's year-and-a-half old "volumetrics" requirement Nov. 13 in an effort to make the planning tool more friendly to homeowners wanting to build additions.

Carmel Principal Planner Brian Roseth explained that volumetrics — a method of controlling the size of a home by limiting its volume — needs some fine tuning so that additions and minor alterations aren't disadvantaged by the new requirement.

Most Carmel homes include features such as tall underfloor areas and steep pitches which inflate the volume and leave little room for an addition under the volumetrics rules.

"Often floor area is available on a site, but not volume — so that creates an incentive for a demolition, one of the last things the city wants an incentive for," Roseth said.

The answer is to exempt the existing house from the volume requirement and stipulate that only the addition should comply.

In addition, the revisions approved by the planning commission would allow planning staff to waive the requirement for minor alterations — such as dormers — that increase volume no more than 2 percent.

The planning commission forwarded the revisions to the city council.

"I continue to be much impressed by the amount of work that went into this to clarify what was a pretty good piece of work to begin with," said planning commissioner Robin Wilson.

HANNAH KREGER, almost 9 months old, still thinks she's a lap dog, even though she is now a chunky, though still cuddly, 56 pounds. Readers who attended the Carmel-by-the-Sea birthday celebration/Halloween parade on Ocean Avenue last month probably saw Hannah on Mom Judy's lap as they sat on the Harrison Memorial Library wall watching swarms of costumed tots and dogs toddle by.

Hannah was tricked out in a pumpkin lid hat and orange and green ruff. But she was sitting like a real baby, slumped back, face forward, legs sticking out awkwardly. No wonder so many visitors took her photo and that of older Lab sister Sara, 13 1/2, who sported a Halloween bandana with the dignity befitting her maturity.

Hannah joined the Kreger family after Sara's sister, Labrador Emmie, passed away in February of this year. Both Dad Leon and Mom Judy see a lot of Emmie in little Hannah. They weren't all that surprised (but they were a little spooked) when Hanna retrieved an old sand mold toy from a two-foot deep hole she dug at Carmel Beach recently. When they wiped off the sand, they saw the name "Emmie" written on it in indelible ink. (Insert scary violin music here).

Although kind and loving toward baby Hannah, Sara won't let Hannah climb up on the bed while she is in occupancy. So Hannah puts one elbow and her head on the bed and gazes at Sara wistfully, hoping to melt Sara's heart. So far, no such luck.

Cutino's Culinary Classique benefits Meals on Wheels in a big way

IT WAS Chef Bert Cutino's brainstorm six years ago that sparked inception of the Culinary Classique d'Elegance, a $225 per person benefit dinner for Meals on Wheels that takes place this year Sunday evening, Nov. 17 at the Monterey Marriott.

The black tie affair has been replicated by other culinary associations in such far flung states as Hawaii and Tennessee, and in Toronto, Canada.

Cutino, co-owner of The Sardine Factory on Cannery Row, said proceeds from the benefit will provide 30,000 meals over a six month period to those Meals on Wheels clients who cannot afford to make a contribution — an example in point of how one person can make a difference in the lives of many.

Cutino's original concept of the dinner was to have 16 chefs prepare a six-course repast for one assigned table of 10 diners, with a total of 16 tables. Each chef is given a list of courses with only the main ingredient shown. It is up to each chef to use the ingredients any way he or she sees fit for each course. Each chef donates the food used and brings staff to help prepare and serve the courses.

This year, the first course will be crab; second course, poultry; an intermezzo course will be chef's choice; the main course will be lamb; and both the salad and dessert courses will be chef's choice.

Chef Wendy Brodie is given credit for suggesting that designers be recruited to design and carry out a theme to decorate the tables, with many of the tables in past years described as "show stoppers." Friendly competition between the chefs and among the designers adds to the evening's fun which culminates in an auction of donated items with Glenn Hammer as auctioneer.

Cutino said the dinner is so popular oftimes tickets are sold out even before invitations are mailed. Meals on Wheels director Viveca Lohr said that $175 of the ticket is tax deductible as a donation.

There may be a few tickets still available. For information, call Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Ginna's Cafe continues innovative dinner series

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

GINNA'S CAFE. Bakery & Gallery in Carmel Valley Village continues its series of theme dinners through November and December with a "Little Plates" cooking demonstration and dinner with chef/owner Ginna Bell Bragg and TomatoFest's Gary Ibsen tonight, Nov. 15. Dinners in the series are all from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. and cost $55 per person, with the exception of a "Taste Truffle" dinner in December.

On Friday, Nov. 22, Bernardus assistant winemaker Jonathan Oberlander will be on hand for a dinner with wines paired to the menu.

Friday, Dec. 6 will bring Steve Di Gangi, president of Coastal Vineyard Management, to the evening feast.

A "Taste Truffles" evening is set for Thursday, Dec. 12 with a variety of courses starring truffles flown in from the Piedmonte, Italy. Steve Di Gangi will preside over the wines at this dinner, which carries a $65 tab per person.

On Saturday, Dec. 14, Scott Thomasen of Epic Wines will select "Unexpected Wine Pairings" for the four-course dinner.

Ginna has set aside the third Thursday of each month for "The Spirit Book and Dinner Club" featuring dinner, reviews of books with a variety of spiritual themes, books for sale, companionship and conversation. The next gathering is slated for Thursday, Nov. 21, with books brought by The Pilgrim's Way Bookshop of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Cost of the dinner is $35, and wine will be sold by the glass.

The cafe, bakery and gallery is located at 19 E. Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley Village.

For information or reservations, call 659-7770.

Eddison & Melrose catering expands, starts Monday night cooking classes

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

CHEF KAREN Anne Murray, owner of the personal chef and catering firm of Eddison & Melrose, has expanded operations with a commercial kitchen and has announced a menu hotline and a series of evening cooking classes to coincide with Monday night football.

The new facility is located at 354 Orange Ave., Sand City. A menu telephone hotline will feature three new entrées weekly for home delivery. Special menus for Thanksgiving and Christmas will be offered, and more elaborate menus are available for dinner parties and weddings.

The Monday night 6 to 8:30 classes commenced last week and will continue with an autumnal theme to make the most of this year's harvest vegetables. Classes are $75 per person. December classes include "The Holiday Waistline" on Monday, Dec. 2; and "Let's Bake Cookies" on Dec. 16 (class lasts until 9 p.m. with a fee of $100).

Murray can be heard on David Kimball's "Jazz on Your Menu" show Sundays from 7 to 8 p.m. on KRML RADIO, 1410-AM.

For menu information, call the hotline at 393-9479; for general questions, call 373-3953 or e-mail eddisonmelrose@aol.com.

RESTAURATEUR SALAMEH INDUCTED INTO HALL OF FAME

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

CARMEL RESTAURATEUR Anton Salameh was inducted into the California Restaurant Association, Monterey County Chapter's Hall of Fame at a special dinner ceremony held at Pasadera Country Club the evening of Nov. 3.

Salameh is the owner of Anton & Michel restaurant located in the Court of the Fountains, Mission between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel-by-the-Sea. He was honored by his peers in the association for his dedication to the restaurant industry. He was singled out by the Carmel Business Association in 1999, winning the Green Ribbon Award of Excellence as Restaurateur of the Year. In 1988 he received a similar award from the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce.

The induction, which was presided over by the association's president, Marie Ramirez, was the second annual Hall of Fame event. Csaba Ajan, a fellow Carmel restaurateur, friend of the honoree and co-owner with Salameh of The Grill on Ocean Avenue, Portabella, and Merlot Bistro restaurants, introduced Salameh to the 100 restaurateurs in attendance.

EMBATTLED WATER DISTRICT WILL MEET MONDAY IN SEASIDE

LESS THAN two weeks after a two-thirds majority of Peninsula voters said they don't think it should exist at all, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board will meet Nov. 18 at Seaside City Hall at 7 p.m .

Agenda items include reports from General Counsel David Laredo on complaints about the newsletter mailed out by the district before the Nov. 5 election and questions about whether board members may have violated the state open meetings law.

The board will also hear reports about the possibility of taking over the California-American Water Company and on the fish-rearing facility at Sleepy Hollow. And it will conduct a public hearing on expanding the regulation of single-user wells in Carmel Valley.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE
of BURT L. RICHARDS, also known as Burt Richards
Case Number MP 16321

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of VALERIE P. BOWERS.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by VALERIE P. BOWERS in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that VALERIE P. BOWERS be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on December 6, 2002 at 10:30 a.m., Dept.: Probate, in the Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Mark McGuire plays early Santa to Special Olympics

THE SPECIAL Olympics Fall Wine Classic held at the Marriott began with a bang when organizers were given a $50,000 donation from the Mark McGuire Foundation. Given the cause, it's very well deserved . . . KGO's Karina Rusk emceed while former Carmel mayor Ken White took on the auctioneering, helped along by 12-year-old Cody Roads, one of the athletes . . . Bill & Laura Stahl, whose Mercedes dealership sponsored the event, unfortunately had to be out of town . . . Larry Horan, a leading local force behind the group, and his wife Jean kept Tom McCullough company. Tom's wife Sherrie stayed home preparing for another event . . . Ducky O'Toole, there with wife Deedee, chatted with Larry & Lane Hayes, Lanette & Jim Penna and the irrepressible — and Honorable — John Anton and wife Marilyn. (If any of you think judges are stuffed shirts, meet some of these local ones!) Ducky, a golf pro, was just recruited by CSUMB to fundraise for their sports and build a booster club. "I'll be a link between the community and the university," he explained. With his energy, he must be eating spinach for breakfast! By the way, Marilyn was recently in Mongolia where she rode a horse into the "Valley of the Eagles" and journeyed in a rickety Soviet-era bus to look at dinosaur fossils in the Flaming Cliffs . . . Doug Beaureegard was sent as emissary by his better half, Jean Hurd, who was hosting another benefit dinner at her house . . . Bill & Norma Wunderlich said it was his birthday: "I like wines, it's a good cause, and how can you beat a tax deductible birthday event?" . . . Bill & Shawn Ebert chatted with Marty & Barbara Pluth. Barbara, who works at Ventana, was having a blast: "It's one of the rare times I'm not behind a table pouring wines!" she said.

Pine Needles

By Sissi Maleki

AS OF this writing, in this community, there are at least a half dozen men who must've gone home to their wives one morning and announced: "You'll never believe this — I had a young chick trying to pick me up at the coffee shop this morning!"

(Actually, they probably said: "Honey, guess what? This very strange, bespectacled woman was trying to pick me up . . .")

Yes, it was me at the coffee shop (with glasses). And no, I wasn't trying to pick up men — certainly not at 8:30 a.m.! I was meeting a business contact for the first time though he already knew what I looked like from my photo in the paper.

As I sat there, I was amazed at how many men, mostly aged about four score, had morning coffee outside the home. My contact had sounded a lot younger on the phone, but for all I knew, he could've had a voice lift.

So with each one who'd show up, I'd glance at him, then look a bit longer, then unmistakably hold the eye contact while trying to get my eyes to say all of the following: "Are you the one? Are you meeting me here? Are you having trouble reconciling me with my photo? Have you got the time wrong and think it can't possibly be me? Are you absolutely sure you're not here for me? Have I got the time wrong?" That last one, directed at myself, got louder and louder in my mind.

I suspect the result of this communication attempt was a sort of Morse code of eyelid twitches. And other than being convinced if I kept this up much longer they'd report me to the cops as a stalker with an original approach, I had no luck. (Unbeknownst to me, my contact had been delayed.)

I finally slunk away, hoping never to repeat such an uncomfortable non-appointment experience.

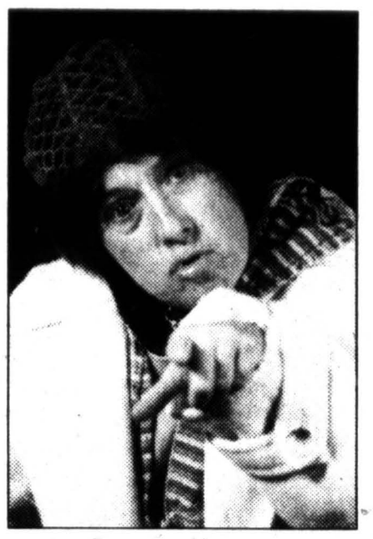
'Signs' an iconoclastic ride through cosmic psychosis

By BEVERLY HILL VAN JOOLEN



Jill Jackson inherits the mantle of Lily Tomlin in Magic Circle's staging of the Jane Wagner one-woman show in Carmel Valley Village.

"The search for Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe" won't fly with mainstream audiences. No matter. The wit of its laser sharp life sketches and talent of its one-woman cast will entertain and stimulate the socially conscious. Maybe it's a generational thing. Or, it could be that the award-winning script is just too full of "truth" (or haughty morality, depending on your point of view). Whatever the reason, "Signs," directed by Robin McKee and Conrad Selvig at the Magic Circle Center, is both an uncomfortable and exceptional journey.

theater review

The play was written in the mid-'80s by veteran writer/director Jane Wagner for her longtime creative partner, Lily Tomlin. "Signs" is more a trip than a story. It's a glimpse into the broken mind of Trudy, an advertising consultant turned bag lady. After realizing the obscenity of her successful presentation for selling snack crackers to Third World countries, Trudy checks out of reality and embraces insanity. "Goin' crazy was the best thing ever happened to me," she assures the audience.

Trudy, played by Jill Jackson, guides her "space chums" on earth tours. In doing so, she morphs into the minds and lives of 10 struggling human beings. Her alter egos crisscross age, gender and social boundaries. The cacophony of characters includes a socialite bored with her excesses, grandparents disappointed in their inadequacies, a housewife searching for the optimal orgasm, and hookers resigned to just doing their job.

Chameleon-like ease

Jackson slips in and out of the 11 characters with chameleon-like ease. She is as believable as an angry punk rock teenager as she is an egocentric man convinced he's fathered a violin virtuoso. Taking on a show expressly written for a specific actor is daunting. It requires not just fleshing out the role, but overcoming the inevitable comparisons to the original star. Jackson succeeds both in avoiding simple mimicry of Tomlin's work, and in establishing her own unique characterizations.

The set, designed by Laura Coté, creates the mirror illusion of an endless cosmic unknown and the infinite depth of a womb-like cave. Lighting, by Julian Carson, adds dimension and mystery to the set. Both the soundtrack and the lighting should be subtle manipulators of emotion; Use of either as a plot device risks distracting the audience. In this case, the music, composed by John Sherry, suggests an arcade atmosphere and the tone diminishes the show's intensity.

"Art. Soup." Trudy presents an imaginary Andy Warhol print and a can of soup to the baffled aliens, but they don't get the difference. There's a lot about humans that confounds her space buddies, but the play offers no resolution, no tidy ending, and no agreement as to whether or not intelligent life actually exists. "Signs" does, however, suggest the discovery of one cosmic truth; whether or not it is the can, or the picture of the can, doesn't matter. It's the questioning of its existence as well as ours that counts. Quills up!

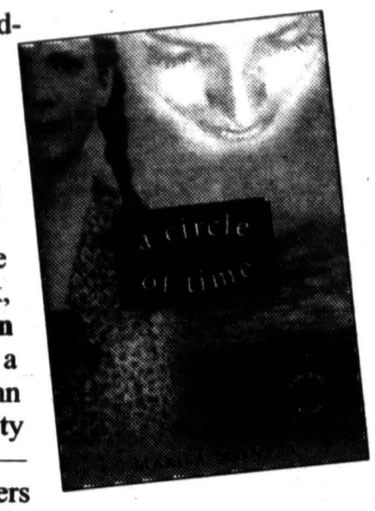
Radically different girls time travel in clever YA novel

MARISA MONTES has written another time travel mystery for young adults — a literate and engrossing tale that will keep even the most well-read teen enthralled and thinking throughout its 261 pages.

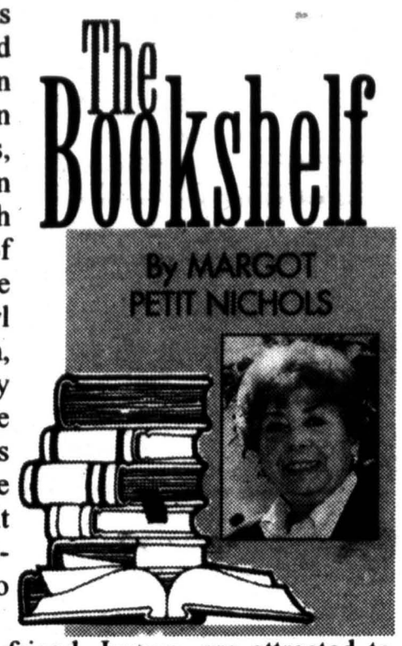


A beautifully produced hardcover by Harcourt, Inc. ($17), "A Circle in Time" will make a splendid holiday gift for the young person who loves to read and enjoys being challenged.

Perhaps you will recall the review of Montes' YA book, "Something Wicked's in Those Woods" that received a favorable review in this column last year because of its quality writing, contemporary plot — orphaned Puerto Rican brothers transplanted to Northern California interlaced with family loss, prejudice, a struggle with language, coping in an unfamiliar region with its many cultural differences — and ghosts and other supernatural phenomena. This new book is even better.

Injured in an accident on a winding mountain road during a fierce storm, 14-year-old Allison Blair, the protagonist, finds herself in a hospital, unable to open her eyes or move. She can hear, though, and learns she is in a coma, her mother by her side. She longs to let her mother know that she can hear and feel her as her mother strokes her hand.

But a voice Allison hears is the voice of a young girl, a girl her own age, who pleads with her for help. Confused and incredulous, Allison finds herself drawn back in time almost a hundred years, awakening in an unknown place, dressed in calico, with long blonde braids instead of her own chestnut hair. She has become a timid girl named Becky, and as such, must somehow save Becky from death in 1906 while Becky's spirit inhabits Allison's body lying in the present day hospital. But is it possible to change the destiny of someone who lived so long ago?



Allison and Becky's boyfriend, Josnua, are attracted to one another — Joshua because Allison is in Becky's body, and Allison because Joshua is a young man she would be drawn to even if he lived in present time. But at long last, Allison reveals who she really is — a teenage girl living a hundred years into Joshua's future. She tells him of the marvels that have happened in those hundred years, stupefying Joshua who finds the electronic age, women's liberation and space travel incomprehensible.

Young adults will have no trouble following this intricate plot that becomes even more enigmatic as Allison and Becky continue to trade places as Allison lies in the on-going coma.

By the end of the book, the plot bears out its title and comes full circle. The novel's denouement is harrowing but ultimately satisfying.

Inns of Distinction Tour set for Dec. 8 in Carmel-by-the-Sea

A SELF-GUIDED tour of 12 of Carmel's quaint and elegant inns is in the offing from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 8, the fourth annual event of its kind sponsored by the Carmel Heritage Society. The Inns of Distinction Tour includes not only a look-see at the hostelries, but food and wine prepared by local restaurants and Monterey County wineries.

Participating inns include Carmel Country Inn, Cobblestone Inn, Colonial Terrace, Cypress Inn, Green Lantern Inn, Hofsas House, La Playa Hotel, Lincoln Green Inn, Pine Inn, Sea View Inn, Stonehouse Inn and Vagabond's House Inn.

Restaurants and wineries supplying provisions include Anton & Michel, Carmel Bistro, Flaherty's, The Gem, The Grill on Ocean Avenue, Il Fornaio, Le Coq d'Or, Lincoln Court, Merlot Bistro, Portabella, Terrace Grill of La Playa Hotel, Village Corner, Baywood Cellars, Bernardus, Chapellet, Chateau Julien, Cloninger, Durney-Heller Estates, J. Lohr, Jekel, Joullian, San Saba-Bocage, Scheid and Ventana.

Tickets are $25 per person the day of the tour, or only $15 in advance for Carmel Heritage Society members and $20 for others. They are available at all of the inns and at First Murphy House at Lincoln and Sixth, Carmel-by-the-Sea. For information, call the society at 624-4447.

Author Marisa Montes, born in Puerto Rico, came to live on the Monterey Peninsula, graduating from the University of California Santa Cruz before earning a law degree from UC Hastings College of the Law. She practiced law for three years, then wrote and edited law books for a decade before turning to novel writing. This is her second YA book. It is available in some local book stores including The Thunderbird Bookshop, Carmel.

IF YOU have a young poet or artist in your family, you'll want to see a 62-page book recently published for 13-year-old poet Natalee Pangrazio and her brother, 14-year-old artist Nathanael Pangrazio, by their grandfather, Jim Rohn. The book of 43 poems is entitled "I Love What I See — The Poems I Wrote When I was Four and More..." It is illustrated beautifully, printed in dark green ink on heavy cream stock. What a thrill it must be for these two youngsters to see their work professionally printed and bound. This lovely little book could well inspire other parents or grandparents to publish the works of talented children in the family. The book will soon be available at The Thunderbird Bookshop and retails for $14.95.

NEEDLES

that it was largely his idea and creation . . . Board member and former prez Dr. Hugh Holtrop got into a bidding war over a case of gorgeously bottled new wine from Baywood, whose hybrid grape was developed by UC Davis. On a more serious note (not that wine isn't serious!), Hugh spoke of the frustration he feels when he sees communities declining to fund necessary programs like senior homesharing. "They need to understand that it's the way to keep productive people within the community," he said . . . Ed Bradford, who had an acting gig for the first time in his life, said his wife Sharon, was helping Vicki Nelson with auction paperwork. "I've been scared to watch the rehearsals," she joked . . . Jennefer Santee, who now splits her time between Carmel and Menlo Park, made it down for this event with her new hubby, Paul Wineman, a dashing former banker . . . Virginia Davison wore a splendid rhinestone, gold threaded, sequined blouse that she made herself some years ago, and later sold a number of them to friends. Hubby Keith keeps busy driving for Meals on Wheels . . . Retired literary agent Ross Hirschorn caught up with Mark & Robbie Meryash who had come to support a good cause. Was Mark on the board? "No, I'm on the board of Alliance Against Aging!" he quipped. (What Robbie said about aging had to be censored here!) . . . Board member Michael McCloud, a financial whiz who was originally recruited by executive director Bruce Hamilton, was with his lovely wife Elisabeth, a yoga therapist . . . Jean Draper brought daughter Wendy Ograin, who came from L.A. to attend the big Carmel High School reunion of all classes on Nov. 16 . . . Morgan Stock was seen waiting sort of patiently. Where was his better half? "June's over there spending money," he said, pointing to the silent auction . . . Al Ham was still beaming over his daughter Pam's new baby. "I waited 'til my 70s to become a grandfather!" he said, explaining that his other grand-progeny was just over a year old. Does he know how to change diapers? "Of course, doesn't everybody?" he replied, obviously well trained . . . Others there: Morley Brown & Ron Weitzman, Connie & Michael O'Connor, Howard & Zaza Skidmore, Marilynn Gustason, Marion Robotti, Carmel Councilwoman Barbara Livingston, Ibby Brennan, Millicent Lawitzke, Dave & Barbara Allard and Verle & Sharon Gish . . .

■ If it's the Red Kettle Kick-Off, it must be bell-ringing season

The Salvation Army's annual Red Kettle Kick-Off Luncheon at Spanish Bay is one good indication that the holidays are coming . . . Imbued with energy from chair Ken White and emcee Dan Green of KSBW, and cheered on by students from Monterey High School, everyone was in a competitive mood for this contest which requries table sponsors to collect as much as possible from everyone. The organization is much in need these days, with so many living on the edge even in this supposedly wealthy area . . . Chuck Poland, with his wife Stella, received the year's Bell Ringer Award . . . Sam & Edie Karas were all set to do their part ringing . . . Jim Tunney looked great, despite recent replacement of both hips. His secret? "I had a great nurse!" he replied, looking affectionately at his gorgeous wife, Linda . . . Carole Lee Dooley told curious friends all about the live auction package she got for this coming Sunday's Meals on Wheels Culinary Classique: It's a whole "Wedding/Renewal of Vows Package," complete with church, dress, the works! (Absentee bids can be called in at 375-4454.) . . . Elizabeth Castle joined with Patsy Strand to sponsor a table that included artist George Rodrigue and Dan's KSBW partner, Erin Clark. Elizabeth has long been one of the biggest supporters and active board members (she's off the board at the moment). She once rang the bell for five days straight. On this day, she briefly shared some colorful stories of her experiences with Salvador Dali . . . Table sponsor Rich Brinton was thanked by Dan Green for giving the day off to Ken, Carmel's former mayor who now works at Brinton's . . . Table sponsor and fire chief Sidney Reade brought firefighting hats to give out as bribes . . . Other table sponsors included Merv Sutton, Jackie Craghead, Cynthia Dusenbury, Kip & Jay Hudson, Lamont Wiltsee, and the duo of Morley Brown and Ione Strum.

OPINION

Editorial

The importance of tar

THE PEOPLE of Carmel can take great comfort in the fact that the town's beloved Sunset Center — on which rest the hopes of next year's Bach Festival and numerous other civic events — is now safely wrapped in a layer of tar paper, ensuring that interior work can continue no matter what the weather. There must not be any disruption in the contractor's schedule if the auditorium is to be finished on time. It's amazing how important a thin layer of tar-soaked felt can be.

The occasion provides not the usual winter-is-here observation about the puniness of humans compared to the mighty forces of nature, but rather a chance to appreciate the achievements of mankind in conquering and controlling its environment.

Even the most ardent nature-lover, for example, prefers to sleep with a roof overhead. Henry David Thoreau, who practically invented the modern back-to-nature movement, made it his first order of business to build a cabin for himself when he arrived at Walden Pond. Philosophers may treasure solitude and scenery — but they don't want it to rain on their beds.

The great American explorers Lewis and Clark loved the wilderness and mainly lived outdoors during their journey from Missouri to the headwaters of the Columbia River. But only because they had to. Like all the other settlers of the American west, they erected solid shelters as soon as they could.

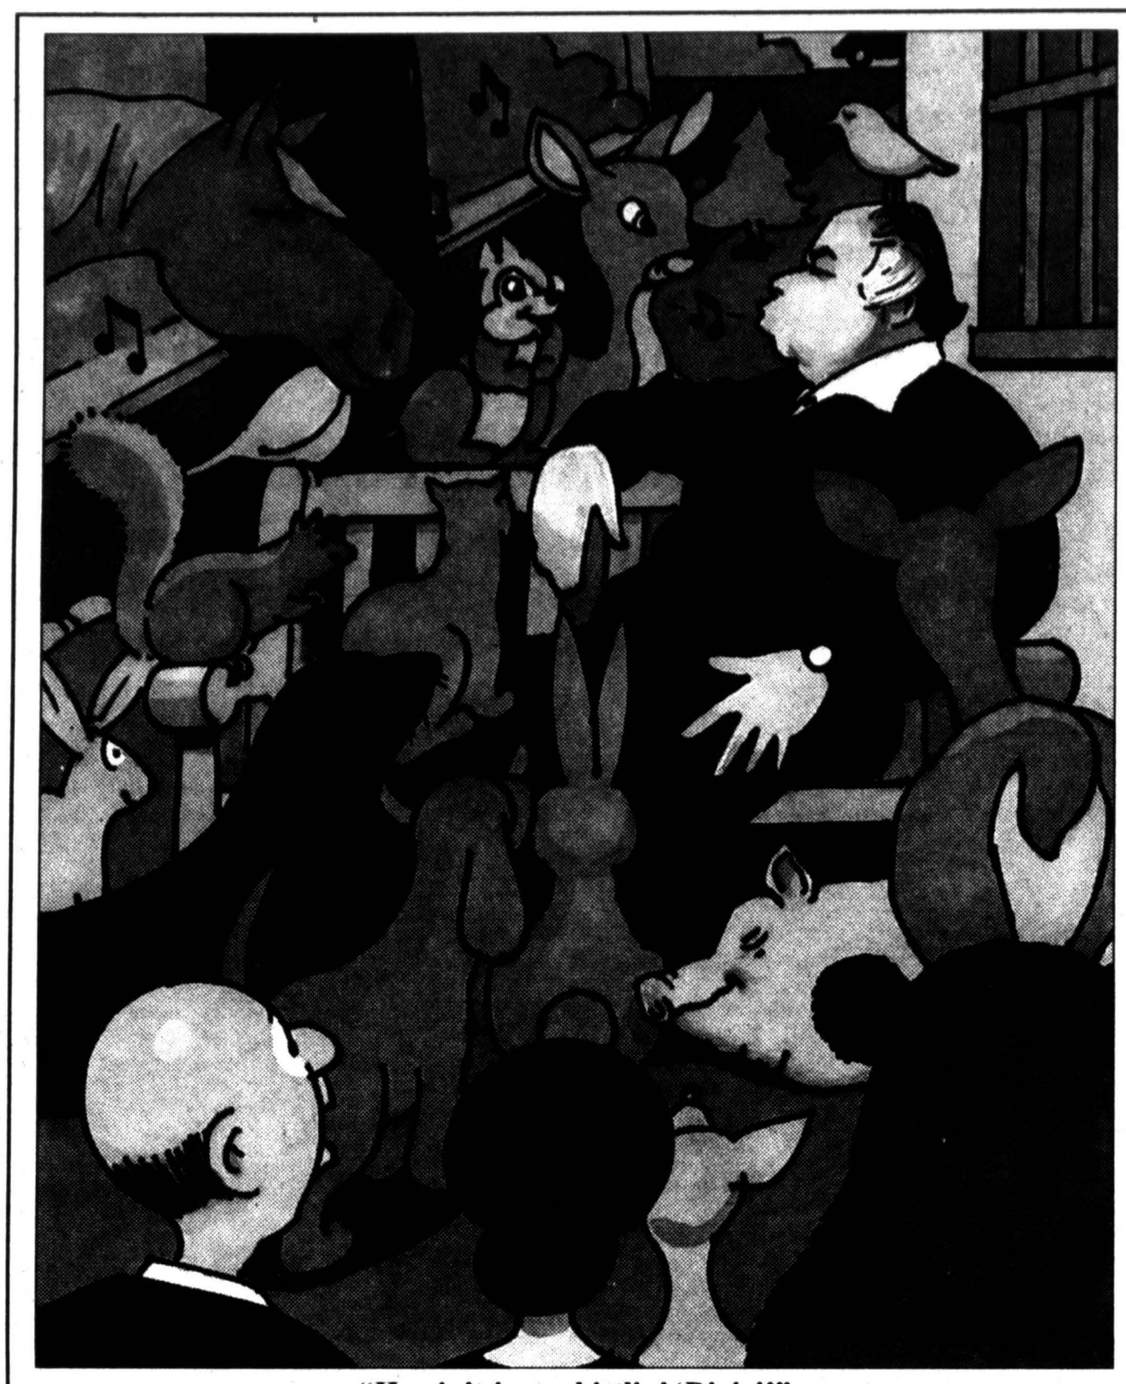
The devotion of modern Californians to the natural world is partly a luxury, afforded by the state of comfort and health in which the great majority of them live. It is also partly a necessity because it can be very stressful to live in the modern, civilized world. But nobody — no matter what they say about themselves — wants to go back to a truly "natural" way of living.

Thus, next summer, as the moving, inspirational sounds of Bach again emanate from Sunset Center, it will be a testimony not only to the great composer and the musicians who bring his incomparable works to the ears of 21st Century man.

Also worthy of tribute will be the craftsmen who made the instruments. And the printers who turned paper into musical scores. And the devoted fundraisers (more contributions are needed, by the way) and city officials who made the new Sunset Center possible. And the architect and the engineers and the contractors and the carpenters and the electricians and the laborers. And the concrete plant and the lumber mill and the tar paper factory . . . .

And when the opening night concert is underway, many in the audience will be thinking, "Isn't it wonderful what a small town can accomplish?"

BEST OF BATES



"He ain't just whistlin' 'Dixie!'"

Letters to the Editor

The Pine Cone encourages submission of letters which address issues of public importance. The Pine Cone reserves the right to determine which letters are suitable for publication. Republicans regroup

Dear Editor,

During the 1930s and 1940s, the California Republican Assembly was the state's leading political organization. With such talent as Earl Warren, Pat Brown and Melvin Belli (then all Republicans) helping, the CRA changed the face of California politics. But slowly the CRA moved away from centrist politics. In 1964, at their acrimonious endorsing convention, the CRA endorsed Barry Goldwater for President. The party moderates were then no longer willing to work with the right-wing CRA and formed a new organization called the California Republican League.

With Casper Weinberger as the first President, CRL became the home for Republicans who are fiscally conservative and socially progressive, including Carla Hills, Pete Wilson, Pete McClosky and many more. In the past year the CRL gas experienced a dramatic resurgence in response to the current right-wing leadership of the California Republican Party.

The philosophy of the CRL mirrors the principles of the majority of Republicans. If the Republican Party would align itself with the CRL, ours would be the majority party in California. Californians are financially conservative and socially moderate. That is exactly the CRL.

The CRL wants to change the party so we can run candidates who represent a majority of Republicans and a majority of Californians. We don't want a new Republican party. We want a party representative of average Republicans. To this end, the CRL PAC has contributed significantly to races around the state. We have expanded our membership to 3,000 and are growing every day.

For 2004, we plan on being a major player. We will actively and vigorously support a new open primary system/ We will recruit candidates for offices at every level and provide the grassroots and financial support they need/ We will also let Californians know that we can create a Republican Party with values consistent with most Republicans.

I encourage any interested to visit our web site at www.republicanleague.org

Irish smiles

Dear Editor,

May I, through the columns of your attractive newspaper, convey our sincere thanks to your gracious Mayor, Sue McCloud, the members of the City Council, City Administrator Rich Guillen and staff, for the warm welcome we received on our recent visits to the City of Carmel. Since hearing of your town, it has had a special significance for us because of the similarity of our names.

When we were on a three-week visit to the United States with our daughter Maureen, for the marriage of our son to his Californian bride, we expressed a wish to visit Carmel and Mayor McCloud kindly agreed to meet with us and the newlyweds. Having been warmly received at City Hall, we were invited back to take part in your 86th Birthday Parade and Barbecue. We very much enjoyed being part of your celebrations and meeting the friendly people of Carmel in your picturesque streets. Having our very own car for the event was a particular treat. Later we walked through your lovely town, along the sea front and beach and sampled the natural beauty and tranquillity which is a special feature of your town.

The visit has given us many treasured memories of our first — though hopefully not last — visit to the United States and we look forward to meeting all our new family and friends again in the near future.

Thank you all so much for your welcome and kindness.

Tom and Carmel Keith, Dungarven Town Council, Waterford County, Ireland

After the first policy year, up to 15% of total premiums paid may be withdrawn without penalty.

Power Rate 5℠ Annuity
Policies are issued by Allianz Life Insurance Company of North America (Form Number P6900N)
After five years, the current interest rate may fluctuate, but never below 3%. Past performance does not guarantee future results. To receive the interest rate bonus, the policy must be held for a minimum of one year and annuity payments made over five or more years. When in a payout period, the interest is guaranteed never to be lower than 2.5%. The payout rate will depend on the age of the policy and payout option elected. If the policy is surrendered, the 2% interest rate bonus is forfeited, a 5% charge applied to premium received in the first five years, and reduced interest is credited.
Product availability and benefits may vary by state.

The Carmel Pine Cone

Real Estate

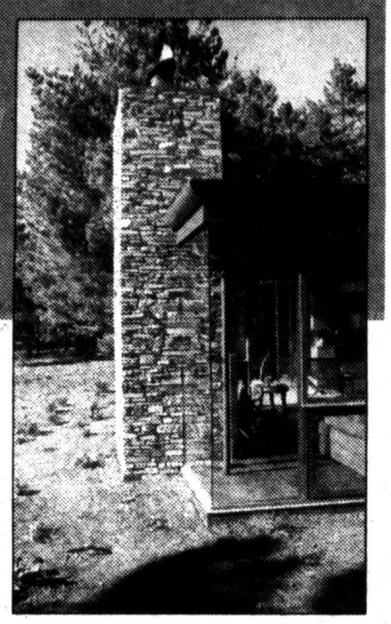
November 15-21, 2002

Renowned Architecture, Renowned Location



The best of both worlds with the majesty of Big Sur yet only 15 miles to Carmel, this five-acre ridge top Mesa with a mostly new main home and a pleasant stroll to an existing guesthouse has stunning ocean views. Softly sculptured series of valleys and ridges display dramatic shadow patterns throughout the day. This was a masterpiece location for world-renowned Big Sur architect Mickey Muennig, who has a genius for marrying the structure to the site. This brilliantly designed 5,300 sq. ft. house of glass, steel, stone and concrete has the utmost level of sophistication in use of these materials and state of the art technical applications.

Council balks at $895,000 Fourth Avenue project

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL City Council last week stressed its eagerness to landscape the Fourth Avenue neighborhood recently cleared of eucalyptus trees but balked at spending $245,000 for a more extensive project to include a bike path.

At the Nov. 5 council meeting, members agreed their biggest priority in the Fourth Avenue area is planting native vegetation to replace the 32 eucalyptus trees removed earlier this year and restoring the drainage ditch.

The council reviewed an estimate put together by a city grant writer and Carmel City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio for a big Fourth Avenue improvement project — including plans for a bike path and pedestrian pathway along that street — totaling $895,000.

Of that amount, the city has already paid $125,000 to cut down the 32 eucalyptus trees earlier this year. It also spent $80,000 to install a storm water separator to capture debris at the Fourth Avenue storm drain outfall.

Two state tax grants, including a Riparian and Riverine Habitat grant for $373,000 and a Land and Water Conservation Fund for $35,000, are available to cover some of the costs.

That would leave the city with the remaining $245,000 bill.

Several city council members were reluctant to commit that much at a time when most capital improvement projects have been frozen for lack of funding.

Councilman Dick Ely questioned how the city could spend $245,000 "in addition to the monies already spent at a time we're not sure if we as a council have the funds to accomplish the work."

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac suggested the city pare down the proposal to include only the necessary repairs.

"I think what all of us had in mind was to replace the trees with native vegetation and replace the storm drain there," said Hazdovac.

The council voted unanimously to support Hazdovac's recommendation, asking city staff to go back to the drawing board and cut out non-essential portions of the project.

Several residents from the Fourth Avenue neighborhood urged the council to follow through with the landscaping and much-needed drainage repair.

"When the eucalyptus trees were removed, it was understood there would be additional landscaping," said Jim Wright. "Currently the storm channel is inadequate in any significant rainfall. It cannot contain the water, which shoots out into the street."

"The water not only goes onto the street, but it goes into our garden, our basement and our garage," said Phyllis Kelly.

The city hopes to remove the open, stone drainage channel and replace it with a more natural channel designed to be wider and shallower.

Carmel City Councilwoman Barbara Livingston noted that the council should be sure to take a second look at the project before the deadline for the $373,000 grant expires.

"It was implicit in the council's action to cut the trees that there should be restoration of the drainage channel," Livingston said. "We're obligated to restore a blighted area. We must go forward with this."

Residents complain that the Fourth Avenue drainage ditch is inadequate, often overflowing during heavy rains.

Time extensions allow homeowners to wait out LCP

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL Planning Commission this week approved a whole batch of permit extensions for homeowners who have received permission from the city to build, but who don't want to take their plans to the California Coastal Commission while the city negotiates its Local Coastal Program with the powerful commission.

The seven time extensions — approved unanimously by the planning commission Nov. 13 — will allow those homeowners to keep their plans active for a year after the LCP is completed, which could be soon. Or it could take awhile. The document is already more than 20 years overdue.

When the LCP is finally finished, the city — not the coastal commission — will have the authority to grant the coastal development permits necessary for the projects to be built.

"It's the advantage of a home rule decision," said Carmel Senior Planner Chip Rerig

Many of the homeowners who applied for the time extensions have been floundering between the city's changing design rules and the coastal commission, which has toughened its approval criteria after hearing concerns from historic preservation activists who say the city is changing for the worse.

A new city law allowing time extensions was approved by the council in July and went into effect in September. The Nov. 13 meeting was the first time the planning commission had the opportunity to grant extensions.

Two of the time extensions were granted to homeowners who have already received permission from the coastal commission to build.

Norm Pressley reached a settlement with the coastal commission last April to build his home in Pescadero Canyon after the commission initially rejected his request. But during the delays, Pressley found his original permit from the city had expired.

Homeowner Gary Martin convinced the coastal commission to let him build a new home on Camino Real only after Carmel's building inspector red tagged the original house on the property — the former home of cartoonist Gus Arriola — as uninhabitable, and the house was demolished.

Martin said he was seeking a time extension for his building permit from the city so he could build his home as well as a new home for his mother on the property at the same time.

The planning commission approved Martin's plans for the second house at the Nov. 13 meeting.

Coastal planner Mike Watson, who attended the meeting, explained that the proposed guidelines were a response to concerns about the changing ambiance of Carmel. Historic preservation activist Enid Sales has frequently asked the coastal commission to intervene in city policies.

"It was an attempt by staff to incorporate and make more effective the residential guidelines you have developed," Watson said.

Monterey City Attorney Bill Conners, sitting in for Carmel City Attorney Don Freeman, advised the council that the law is on the city's side when it comes to deciding local issues — such as parking — not mentioned in the Coastal Act.

"The wording of the Coastal Act does not suggest preemption of local planning by the state," Conners said, pointing to two pertinent California Supreme Court Decisions.

"I'm not saying disregard the coastal commission and its staff, but at the same time, please don't feel you have to accept what the coastal staff is telling you. There is no gun to your head."

The council, seemingly buoyed by Conners' comments, stood its ground against changing the long-time Scenic Road ban on overnight parking to a four-hour prohibition between 1 and 5 a.m.

The coastal staff had earlier tried to eliminate the dusk-to-dawn parking ban on Scenic Road (saying it would give better night-time access to the beach) but then offered the 1 a.m.-to-5 a.m. ban as a compromise.

The council was split over whether to accept the offer. While Councilman Dick Ely called the coastal staff's suggestion "reasonable," McCloud argued that it wasn't much of a compromise.

"I really think the commission is coming down harshly on Carmel, relative to what the state gets at Carmel River State Beach and Point Lobos," said McCloud. (Both parks, owned by the State of California, close at sunset.)

Councilman Gerard Rose questioned whether the coastal commission even had the authority to order Carmel's "no parking" signs covered up last year. (The commission called the parking signs a "development" that required a coastal permit.)

"I don't concede that putting up parking signs means development," Rose said. "The fact that they rattled their swords at us doesn't mean they're correct."

The council decided to offer a compromise of its own — to ban Scenic Road parking from 10:30 p.m. to 5 a.m.

The city's new rules on historic preservation, extensively revised by the city since they were first drafted a year ago, were OK'd by the coastal commission staff. Earlier, the rules earned the endorsement of State Historic Preservation Officer Knox Mellon and his predecessor, Kathryn Gualtieri.

Gualtieri, also a former member of the city's historic preservation commission, came to the meeting and underscored her support.

During the discussion, Livingston argued for an independent historic preservation board that wouldn't have to report to the planning commission.

"Until we have an historic preservation board that is autonomous, it's never going to have the validity or integrity it deserves," Livingston said. She was outvoted by the majority.

'Stifling bureaucratese'

The council was surprised by some of the minutiae coastal staff added to the LUP, such as detailed rules for special events.

"Can this be boiled down to something tremendously less than a page and a half of bureaucratic language?" asked McCloud. "It just seems unbelievably bureaucratic and stifling."

Members were also taken aback by an addition to the shoreline management section that could commit the city to long-term studies of sand levels as well as the use of sea walls at Carmel Beach.

Ely pointed out that the scientific community is still split over whether sea walls are superior to rip rap for protection against erosion, and he argued the city should be allowed to keep its options open.

The document's description of "Environmentally Sensitive Habitat Areas" — which state law requires be strictly protected — also captured a lot of attention at the meeting. Principal Planner Brian Roseth said the city received a request from the Carmel Development Company to change the ESHA section of the proposed LUP, which contained language describing several sub-types of Monterey pine as important flora. In response to the complaint, Roseth recommended the language be removed.

A long haul

The five-hour meeting tested the patience of the council members with McCloud sometimes cutting her colleagues' comments short in an effort to move the meeting forward.

In response to some criticism from the audience that the council was rushing through the report, councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said she felt confident about the product.

"I don't think it will ever be clearer until we get to the final version," Hazdovac said. "I don't think we should keep putting it off. We should pursue it and move on."

"The only reason I agree that we need to take a vote is because we have been put under the gun by the coastal commission to have the input by Friday," said Ely. "They're going to have a meeting in December regardless."

Livingston, while noting there were some things in the LUP she didn't support, agreed to vote in favor of the document.

"I am going to vote to pass it along because this has been a long time coming and we need to get on with other things," she said.

Meanwhile, Dave Potter, coastal commissioner representing the Central Coast, predicted that the December hearing before the state body would be favorable to Carmel.

"I think the city has put an awful lot of work into this," Potter said. "It's long overdue, and I'm glad to see it coming forward. I think the commission as configured now will be sympathetic to the concerns of the city,"

BATTLE

One of the speaker's appointees, Cynthia McClain-Hill, was bitterly critical of Wan, saying she "needs to win at all costs without regard to what's true," according to a report in the San Diego Union-Tribune.

But the environmentalists who back Wan aren't going quietly. Just before Nov. 5, with the governor up for reelection, the San Francisco Chronicle carried a front-page story alleging that Davis had arranged coastal permits for donors to his reelection campaign. The story was part of a campaign by Wan's supporters to pressure Davis to leave her alone, according to a source in Sacramento who insisted on anonymity.

"There's a bloodbath going on," said another source.

Constitutional challenge

With Democrats in control of the State House, the battle inside the coastal commission pits the moderate wing of the party, led by Davis, against its more liberal faction, led by State Senate president John Burton of San Francisco. Republicans are nowhere in sight.

But the week after the coastal commission showdown in San Francisco, property rights advocates will have an opportunity to convince a California Court of Appeal in Sacramento that the commission is unconstitutional.

The case, Marine Forests Society v. California Coastal Commission, resulted in a trial court ruling in May 2001 that the coastal commission had too much power and must be restructured. The founder of the society, Rodolphe Streichenberger, challenged an order from the commission that he dismantle an experimental coastal reef off the Newport Beach pier. His case is being handled by Ronald Zumbrun, former head of the conservative Pacific Legal Foundation.

In response to Streichenberger's suit, Judge Charles C. Kobayashi said the commission is controlled by the Legislature — which appoints two-thirds of its members — but exercises legislative, executive and judicial functions, violating the separation of powers clause in the California Constitution. The coastal commission must be restructured, the judge ruled, so that the Legislature has less control over appointments, or the commission must give up some of its power.

If the appeals court upholds Kobayashi's ruling, the case will probably end up in front of the state supreme court.

The Marine Forests Society case will be heard on Dec. 16 at 9:30 a.m. at 914 Capitol Mall in Sacramento.

The California Coastal Commission will meet December 10 - 13 at the Hyatt Regency Embarcadero in San Francisco.
